The presence of estrogen receptor (ER)-beta was detected in the rat brain and pituitary gland. The physiological and/or pathophysiological roles of estrogen receptors (ERs) in the central nervous system (CNS) are not fully understood. Therefore, in the present study, the presence of ER-beta mRNA in the rat brain was examined by means of reverse transcriptase-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR) and Northern blotting. RT-PCR analysis showed that the ER-beta mRNA was expressed in the brain, pituitary gland and ovary. The highest levels of ER-beta mRNA were found in the pituitary gland and ovary, in which ER-beta mRNA was predominantly detected in the ovary. Northern blotting also revealed the presence of ER-beta mRNA in the pituitary gland and ovary. The results demonstrate the presence of ER-beta in the rat brain and pituitary gland.// Code generated by private/model/cli/gen-api/main.go.
