The immediate problem was a lack of men. -. The Allied. armour. There is an unlikely parallel with a,n Afrika Korps motorised unit formed of captured Greek. The Afrika Korps was based on the Italian army. The TIGER-52 (Schwarze Tiger 52) assault gun had been the main panzer infantry gun at the start of World War II. Unfortunately for Germany it was a one-trick pony and it had proven incapable of putting up much of a fight against heavy Allied armour. After the Italian Army was overrun, some of its TIGER units were surrendered to the Germans. In March 1942 the German forces in North Africa consisted of three armoured formations, the Afrika Korps, Kesselring's Panzer Army Africa and General von Arnim's 10th Army. All were operating in the western part of the Sahara desert, around El Agheila and Bir Hacheim. The Afrika Korps had around of tanks and motorised infantry as well as mounted artillery. The next phase of the Allied campaign came in mid-April, when the British Eighth Army began the huge but well planned Operation Gazala. A few days later, the tanks of Lieutenant-General Bernard Montgomery's British Eighth Army drove for the enemy line on El Agheila. Kesselring's Panzer Army Africa was now facing the British XXX Corps and the fast-moving British XXXXI Corps. The Allies' thrust involved three columns, code-named Compass, Attacker and Fighter. The Afrika Korps' commander, General der Panzertruppe Hans von Arnim resisted until he had to withdraw on 25 April, leaving the armour stranded. This is another game with the same map size as the original Panzer Corps, and it also includes the Afrika Korps expansion, which contains two scenarios, "Valor" and "Sea Lion". The combat rules are not as detailed as in the original game, but there are lots of hex counters to represent the units and their weapons, and each unit can be captured, which lets you progress through the scenarios. The game seems to be very much a follow on from Panzer Corps, and features two scenarios, set around the El Agheila and Bir Hacheim battles. The campaign map has several other key actions as well. It is noted that this game has some problems with the units. But the end result is that the game is a "good follow on 2d92ce491b
