Dreamweaver Dreamweaver is the name of one of the latest editions to the modern Web page creation suite Adobe has named ColdFusion. One of ColdFusion's most popular features is the _hot-swapping_ of code right on the page. Imagine the power of being able to insert code directly onto the page and see it instantly take effect—even if it's HTML or PHP code. If you add an element to a page using Dreamweaver, it's visible to every visitor on that page. The menus are easy to navigate, and the drag-and-drop editing system is handy if you're not looking for the in-program help system. It's fairly intuitive, if a bit slow in placing images into the edit screen. The program is also great for creating complex markup (the code that controls the overall layout and appearance of a page) and looks very slick. Dreamweaver can create entire sites using just a single page. COMPATIBILITY *
Dreamweaver supports a wide range of browsers and Internet Explorer versions.

Parathyroidectomy is associated with improved survival among patients with squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck. Although parathyroidectomy is used as first-line therapy for symptomatic hypercalcemia of malignancy in patients with squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck, the survival benefit associated with its use is uncertain. A cohort of patients with hypercalcemia of malignancy or squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck were identified. Predictors of cause-specific survival and the influence of parathyroidectomy on survival were evaluated. We identified 77 patients with hypercalcemia of malignancy or squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck who received parathyroidectomy between 1970 and 1992. In the present study, survival from the time of parathyroidectomy was estimated by Kaplan-Meier analysis with comparison of survival curves by log-rank test. Adequate parathyroid gland function was demonstrated preoperatively in 49 patients, and inadequate function was demonstrated in 28 patients. Preoperative serum calcium levels were less than 12 mg/dL in 23 patients and equal to or greater than 12 mg/dL in 54 patients. The median follow-up was 23 months. Parathyroidectomy was completed with ease in all cases. Fifty-four patients (70%) required only a single operative procedure, whereas 20 patients (26%) required multiple operative procedures. Postoperatively, 13 patients (17%) required irradiation alone, 10 patients (13%) required irradiation and adjuvant chemotherapy, and 25 patients (33%) required irradiation, chemotherapy, and both adjuvant and palliative radiation to various parts of the body. The 5-year cause-specific survival was 33% in patients who did not have adequate preoperative parathyroid gland function and 47% in those who had such function ($p = .03$). The 5-year cause-specific survival was 33% in patients who had a single operation, 42% in those who had multiple operations, and 36% in those who underwent parathyroidectomy before preoperative calcium levels were ≥ 12 mg/dL ($p = .5$). Parathyroidectomy confers a significant survival benefit in the treatment of patients with hypercalcemia of malignancy or squamous cell carcinoma of the head and neck. We have not shown, however, that parathyroidectomy is associated with survival benefits when used either as first-line treatment or as palliative therapy.
