This invention relates to ladder safety devices and more particularly to a ladder safety device which is adapted to be mounted on a ladder upon which a user is positioned. Ladders are very useful devices for aiding persons in the performance of various tasks, such as painting or the like. However, the use of ladders creates a very real safety hazard for persons using the ladder, particularly children. In order to alleviate this safety hazard, various ladder safety devices have been developed, both patented and unpatented. The majority of these devices, however, are quite cumbersome or are otherwise expensive to manufacture. It is therefore a principal object of this invention to provide a ladder safety device which is inexpensive to manufacture. It is another object of this invention to provide a ladder safety device which has a minimum of parts and is easy to construct. It is yet another object of this invention to provide a ladder safety device which is easily mounted on a ladder.
