DeReZo Throws Down the Gauntlet in “Virushk: The Birth of the Virus” (1980) “You’ll find it in the rough, but it’s inside the smooth — that’s the O’Shea Zone.” DeReZo (pronounced De-rez-oh) is the full creative name of John Zielinski (now Zielinski). The name is a reference to a famous quote from Steve Jobs, who said “a computer on every desk and in every home.” And, as it turns out, he was not only talking about computers, but also their wild side: wild horses, rivers, ships and planes. DeReZo was responsible for some of the most bizarre computer graphics ever created in the 80’s. His work is far out, stoned, and just plain wacky. Here are a few highlights from his list of accomplishments: “VideoCheck,” a computer based video editing system “Attack of the Killer Bees,” a computer based adventure game “Deep Sea Man,” the Monopoly board game for Commodore PET computers “S-Store,” the first “virtual” vending machine in the world “Alien Bunny,” a computer game that simulated the swimming of a sad-looking little creature lost in space “Chainsaw,” a color scanner that could turn wood chips into colorful drawings “Piece of Cake,” a vast interactive mosaic puzzle in multiple dimensions “Twin Ponies,” the first real-time 3-D animated road race “Sci-Fi Theatre,” a mind-blowing photo-realistic space opera “War,” a computer game that simulated battle in space “Rapid Fire,” a 3-D rifle simulator that could shoot the virtual bullets out of your hands “Virus,” a computer virus that designed itself — only to later be destroyed “Nuclear Dragons,” a computer game that simulated the devastation of a superweapon attack “Starflight,” the first real-time 3-D space simulation game “Mankind,” a hi-res human face morphing

We all know what a rock star is. But a superstar? A stadium rock star? That’s the description used by the Eagles to describe stadium guitarist Joe Vitale. The Eagles’ V Club Joe V, is at the center of the new Eagles Ballroom on Hollywood Boulevard and Sunset Blvd. in Los Angeles for the Eagles’ In the City of the Stars event. Joe Vitale, has been recognized as one of the greatest and most innovative musicians of our generation. His signature licks are featured on hundreds of recordings and his music is heard on more than one billion records sold worldwide. But on Thursday, June 17th in Los Angeles, the Eagles have created a new category of rock star. Joe will be appearing live with the Eagles at the Eagles

Ballroom in Hollywood, Saturday June 19th as part of their 2017 “In the City of the Stars” residency. Vitale is the head guitar player on the Eagles’ 1990s mega-hit album One of These Nights. He joined the band in 1989 after John McVie departed. He has been with the group ever since. Fans have long been wondering when Vitale would make his first live appearance with the group. This performance marks not only the first time, Joe has been part of an Eagles live show, but also has been asked to help organize In the City of the Stars for the first time. “When they asked me to do this, the first thing I thought was ‘It’s a great honor.’” “The only other time I’ve worked with the Eagles is when I played one of their shows in 1969,” Joe told me. “I first met them when John McVie and I were doing background work on ‘Take It Easy.’ I’m thrilled to be here and this is kind of a dream come true.” Joe Vitale has been a long-time Eagles fan since I first got to interview him when the band’s hit, “Best Of My Love,” came out in 1976. In a 2003 interview, I asked Joe if he thought the Eagles would be there if the music industry hadn’t turned around in the late ‘80s. “I think so. They were living the dream then,” Joe told me. “
